Kimley-Horn Donates Over Ten Tons of Food to 50 Food Banks

RALEIGH, NC – March 28, 2016 – North Carolina-based Kimley-Horn recently donated 20,000 pounds of food to over 50 food banks across the country.

From March 2-16, Kimley-Horn hosted a March Madness-themed food drive centered around two of the firm’s core values: sharing and caring, and high expectations. Nearly tripling the donation goal, the firm is thrilled to help local organizations at a time of year when donations typically decline.

“Community involvement is important at Kimley-Horn,” says President and CEO John C. Atz. “Our employees are passionate about helping their communities through their work—improving roadways, designing healthcare facilities, building bridges, addressing environmental concerns, and more. The food drive was a great opportunity to play a different role in the communities where we live and work.”

The food drive’s efforts align closely with the Kimley-Horn Foundation, which has given more than one million dollars in grants to non-profit organizations.
